Pages one to three list MIS-X reports generated by MIS-X in London with details of American escapers and evaders in western Europe. Up until D-Day, most evaders in western Europe generally tried to reach England, usually through Spain, but after the Allied landings in Normandy, they tended to evade in the country in which they found themselves, sheltered by local people, and sometimes resistance organisations, until the advancing Allied forces reached them. All these reports are available for free download from the US National Archives and Records Administration (NARA) at Maryland.

Page four is a list of MIS-X reports generated by MIS-X (CPM) at Fort Hunt, Virginia with details of American escapers and evaders from other theatres around the world.

Pegasus refers to the M19 operation that brought a large party of evaders across the Rhine to Allied lines the night of 22/23 Oct 1944

Note that I have used the words 'sheltered' and 'evaded' almost interchangeably in the case of many evaders in Holland at this time
